CERF PROGRAM

The Climate-Regenerative Rolling Workshop Series

What humanity has been doing in a fragmented way to address the Climate Crisis has not adequately worked. New collaborative and collective approaches are now required as we have less than five years to act decisively and on a global scale with cohesive systems, in perpetuity. No single organization, institution or government is going to move the needle on the climate crisis without diverse and widespread conscious collaboration.

It is time for humanity to foundationally change how we live in this world.

We are bringing together high-level transdisciplinary representatives and global leaders to take collaborative actions to create solutions to solve the climate crisis. Representative groups of humanity need to be present in the conversations that will shape and architect support systems for our global future. In this environment, we engage these unique skill sets to creatively build new networks, frameworks and solutions to effect catalytic changes that can quickly and effectively balance the planet.

COLLABORATION

CERF PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

What We Achieve Together:

- 1 Recognition that we now need a global shift in consciousness, collaborative approach, solutions paradigm and AI-based platform technology to organize, develop and deliver crisis resolution solutions, resources and technologies that are available to all.
- 2 Workshop participants will help define the capacities required for the global community to generate scalable solutions to solve the climate crisis in the time available.
- 3 Workshop participants recognize the vital importance of their commitment to long-term collaboration with each other in order to generate the required scalable capacity between the world's stakeholders, networks and thought leaders.
4. Establish a prototype for climate crisis resolution workshops to be offered to the world in order to foster global collaboration.
- 5 Engage and unite high capacity, motivated workshop participants in lasting collaborative partnership with WSS for the building of the PHOENIX platform.

A New Structure and Model:

Leveraging the expertise of seasoned facilitators, our workshops are structured to transform diverse dialogues into a unified roadmap for effective climate action "The Climate Emergency Response Forum (CERF) is uniquely tailored to create a sustainable, long-term operational structure of expanding, replicable, continued dialogue as a cohesive network committed to climate crisis resolve. We recognize that cohesive collaboration has been a missing piece in many global efforts. We are forging a path to not only identify solutions but to implement them widely. We truly believe that through this approach, we can make significant strides in resolving the Climate Crisis. For lasting global impact, we need a new collaborative framework. Imagine organizations dedicating teams for a united goal of climate resolution. Ten organizations might jointly commit 50 professionals, forming a unified, dedicated team. Entities should see this as a vital investment in our climate's future. Corporations should aim for genuine impact, not just optics. We call on organizations to be steadfast contributors to a global climate action network. to be integral threads in a persistent global tapestry dedicated to collaborative climate action.
